Elmer Calhoun, Ton Litter Contestant, Makes Fine Record

Pigs Slightly Over Five Months Old Tip Scales at 2,676 Pounds

FEED COST CHEAP
Litter Produced at Feed Cost of $5.75 Per 100 Pounds

The first ton litter in the county was weighed yesterday afternoon at the home of Elmer Calhoun, Fulton Route 1. The object of these weighings, according to County Agent Smith is to teach the importance of using a protein supplement in feeding hogs for meat.

Prices are being offered by the Temple Cotton Oil company to winning litters in this county and over $400 is being offered in the state for winning litters.

These pigs were grade Poland Chinas and were fattened on May 14, 1930. They were just a little over five and one half months old and weighed a total of 2,676 pounds and were produced at a feed cost of $5.75 per hundred.

Following is a copy of the record furnished by Mr. Calhoun:

"I expect to put the litter just fattened on my self feeder and finish them as soon as possible," stated Mr. Calhoun. "The wheat reduced my cost of production considerably since it is a much cheaper feed at the present prices."

Cost of feed:
Corn 48 bu. at $1.10 $ 52.80
Wheat 2700 lbs. at $1.80 48.60
Tankage 433 lbs. at $3.00 12.99
C. S. Meat 300 lbs. at $2.00 6.00
Whey 220 gallons 4.40
Charge on sow 25.00

Total $149.79
In the guessing contest conducted by the weighers, W. H. Thompson was first and E. L. Thompson second. Thompson guessed 2700 pounds and the litter weighed 2676 pounds. A sack of cotton seed meal was given as first prize. George Clark (colorado) won a sack of flour since he came nearest guessing the cost per cent.

The following persons were present at the weighing: Newton Borchgrevink, Fulton Route 1; C. W. Conley, Columbia; Mr. and Mrs. P. L. Ponder, S. F. Huntley, W. W. Duckett, Lyman Padgett, W. H. Thompson and E. L. Lane, Hope; Mrs. E. R. Calhoun, W. Thomas, W. W. Davis, W. A. Ainsworth and J. A. Ainsworth, Washington.

Kidnaper Tells Abduction Story

Tricked Kidnaper Admits Abduction Plot and Tells Story of Plan to Hold Rich Illinois Banker For Ransom Money

KEWANEE, Ill., Oct. 31.—(AP)—Vernon Abigien, small town hoodlum, Thursday night made a full confession to the kidnapping of Earl L. Yocum, Galva (Ill.) bank president. He implicated three other men, one of whom is in custody.

The two remaining members of the gang were the object of a manhunt which covered over four counties. More than 200 highway police, deputy sheriffs and special policemen threaded the counties under a gifting snow, searching every wood and thicket for the fugitives who are on foot and unarmed.

Abigien was captured after he had been seen hiding in the woods on the farm near here. Chief of Police J. D. Krumpholtz, Inspector George Newell of the American Bankers' Association, and two police men surrounded and captured the man. After a brief silence, he started telling the story of the kidnapping.

High lights of the confession included the statement that the gang had kept the banker hidden in a hunting lodge on the Illinois river near La Grange, Ill., and the revelation that the kidnappers after successive demands of $25,000, $100,000 and $250,000 ransom, finally had been tricked into releasing their prisoner without collecting a cent.

Ramming Fight on Road
Aggravated at this "double cross," the kidnappers telephoned Yocum that his home would be bombed. He then promised to pay an installment of $2,500. He promised to send a representative with the money to a deserted place on the Lone Tree road, two miles from Kewanee. Police kept the engagement.

The three members of the gang sped away as the police car drove up and a four-mile chase followed in which shots were fired by both pursuers and the fugitives. The latter's car plunged through a fence and into a haystack in a field in attempting to make a sharp turn. The three men jumped out and disappeared across the fields into the darkness. They left four revolvers and a hood used to mask Yocum in the car.

The manner in which the gang was tricked into releasing Yocum was this: Their second ransom letter, delivered to Mrs. Yocum Monday, ordered her to place $100,000 in a package underneath a bridge near Leland, Ill., about 75 miles from here. The package was to be wrapped in a white cloth.

Dummy Package Used
Mrs. Yocum gave the letter in Inspector Newell. He and Chief Krumpholtz made up a dummy package and placed it as directed underneath the bridge. Abigien admitted that the gang, described as amateur kidnappers, trustedly decided that the package contained the money and Yocum was released by two members of the gang near Atkinson, Ill., while a third man waited cautiously about the bridge before taking the package and discovering the fake.

In addition to Abigien, Harry Williams of Cambridge, Ill., was in custody. He was arrested Tuesday but has refused to talk. Abigien said (Continued On Page Six)

Hope Loses Game To Gurdon 6 to 0, But Protests It

Gurdon Player Expelled For Profanity, But Team Isn't Penalized

SHOULD BE 0 TO 0
Coach Wilkins Maintains Game Should Have Ended in Tie

Although the decision of the referee in the Hope-Gurdon game at Gurdon Thursday ruled the Bobcats were defeated by a score of 6-0, the decision has been protested by Hope as unfair, and in violation of football rules.

Judge D-beats do not concede the defeat, but claim that the game should have ended in a scoreless tie, according to Coach Wilkins.

In Last 5 Minutes
The cause of the dispute came in the last five minutes of play with the Gurdon team on Hope's 40-yard line. During the play a Gurdon player was taken from the field on account of the use of profane language.

The violation of rules also carried with it a penalty of fifteen yards, according to Coach Wilkins. This part of the code of rules was disregarded and during this play Gurdon crossed the Hope goal line by means of a forward pass.

During the argument between the coaches that ensued over the disputed score the referee is reported to have said "that he did not care what the rule book said in regard to the matter but that it would count as a touchdown for Gurdon."

The football rule in reference states that in the event of a player being taken from the game on account of the use of profane language that his team shall be penalized 15 yards from the preceding line of scrimmage. It is the rule that the Bobcats say the referee refused to confirm when he made the decision in favor of the Gurdon team.

Won't Meet Again
There has been some mention that the game be played over again in order to settle the dispute, but Coach Wilkins said today that he would not permit the Bobcats to play against Gurdon again even if the latter should be willing. He says that inasmuch as the decision was not made in accordance with football rules the matter would be dropped and no further game would be forthcoming.

Report On October Cotton Ginnings
Figures Show 49.6 Percent of Production on Same Late Last Year

Hempstead county is apparently making half as much cotton this year as last.

Total ginnings of new cotton cut on October 18 were 9,422 bales, against 19,111 bales in 1929. Webb Laster Sr., reported to the Department of Agriculture.

These figures show current production about 50 per cent of production on the same date last year.

The percentage compares favorably with reports from even larger cotton sections than this one. Earlier in the fall it was reported that Mississippi county, Arkansas, would run about 50 per cent of the 1929 yield.

The exchange desk of The Star Outlets from the Tupelo (Miss.) Daily News showing the yield in Lee county, Mississippi, to be 58.4 per cent of last year on the basis of ginnings to October 18. The Mississippi county, which last year produced 28,253 bales on that date, showed only 16,505 bales on the same date.

Lee county's total yield last year was 22,530 bales.

He was indicted in March after his arrest at Toledo, O., following his escape from the penal farm at Tucker several months earlier. He was charged with stealing an automobile near the state farm in escaping.

Why Stock Prices Fall

THERE has been a good deal of agitation recently about the desirability of putting some sort of curb on the activities of speculators on the stock exchange who sell stocks short—who sell, that is, stocks which they do not own, in the expectation that the price will drop so that they will be able to buy before they have to make delivery, at a lower price than that at which they bought.

Beyond any doubt the short-seller has been something of a nuisance during the last few months. Time and again he has served to drive prices down. He is a gambler, pure and simple. He cares nothing about the condition of the country or the welfare of industry generally; he is interested only in speculating on the decline, and he has had a number of field days during the last year.

But in our eagerness to put a halter on the bear trader, it will not do for us to assume that the bear trader is solely responsible for the stock market crash of a year ago. He is not the only type of speculator whose influence is damaging to the country at large. The bull—the speculator who buys in the expectation of a rise—can be quite as harmful a factor, if not more so.

Consider the case for a moment. For fully three years previous to October of 1929 we had a bull market. Prices had constantly been rising, so that millions of people caught the fever and plucked their savings into the market. Everyone was gambling—gambling on a continuous rise in prices. As an inevitable result, the prices of stocks went soaring up out of all proportion to their true value. People bought stocks at twice and three times their intrinsic worth. The market gave the appearance of perfect health, but was extremely sick under the surface.

Naturally enough, a crash had to come. It came, and prices went tumbling. Of course, once the crash started the bears got busy, and helped it along; but the prime cause of the crash was not the bears, but the bulls who had built the market up to such a shaky position that a mere shove would send it toppling.

The bear is not the only danger. Sometimes the bull can be equally a bad influence. The point is worth keeping in mind.

The Price of An "Open Town"

A DISPATCH to the Chicago Tribune remarks that a certain Illinois city is "putting on the lid" because of the future following the murder by gunmen of a gambler's wife. This city, it develops, has been an "open town" for two decades; but this murder indicated the development of formidable, lawless underworld gangs, and city officials found a shut-down in order.

Thus, once more, is illustrated the curious dilemma of American city officials. If they govern a city where popular sentiment favors an "open town"—and there are many such cities—they court the growth of a dangerous underworld organization, which fattens on the revenues from gambling and booze joints. If they close the town up to choke off the gangsters the voters, deprived of their amusement, are apt to rebel and put in a new regime. All in all, it is a peculiar, and somewhat discouraging, sign of the times.—El Dorado Evening Times.

A Test For Football

COLLEGE football seems to be having sporadic bits of trouble again this fall. An eastern football star, confessing that he is sick of the game, is ordered to hand in his uniform. Six players at another eastern university ask for higher wages and are dropped. A western university is dropped by an athletic conference because it has subsidized and recruited prominent stars.

It would not do, of course, to pounce on these incidents and declare, because of them, that college football is all wrong. It is a fine game, and it provides enjoyment for many thousands of people. But there is one fair test you can apply in any given situation.

If football at any college exists primarily to provide the players with wholesome and enjoyable athletic recreation, then it is on a sound basis, no matter how much money comes in at the gate. If it exists for any other primary reason it is on an unsound basis and needs doctoring very badly.

Preparing For Christmas

CHRISTMAS is still quite a distance ahead of us, but it is not exactly too early to begin to take care of that Christmas shopping job. It's a fine feeling to come up to the last week before the holiday knowing that you have bought and mailed all the gifts you are going to buy. The last-week rush doesn't affect you at all.

By the same token, it is not at all too early to begin to plan on Christmas relief. For a great many families this winter Christmas will be only a mockery, unless those of us who are more fortunate do our part with a will. In every city there are many families that will need help. Now is a good time to begin making plans for them.—El Dorado Daily News

Great Expectations

Daily WASHINGTON LETTER

BY RODNEY DUTCHER
NRA Service Writer

WASHINGTON—The difference between the real liberals in politics and those who claim to be liberals because they are wets was never more clearly accentuated than in the political campaign now drawing to its close.

One thing the wets and the progressives have in common—they are both opposed to a status quo. The wets want repeal of the eighteenth amendment or modification of the Volstead act. The progressives think it is more important to relieve unemployment, curb the "power trust," fight labor injunctions, help the farmers, keep reactionary judges off the supreme court and so on.

Most of the outstanding progressives seem to be quite dry. Senators Borah of Idaho, Norris of Nebraska and Walsh of Montana, for instance. Also such 1930 candidates as Gifford Pinchot, running for governor on the Republican ticket in Pennsylvania, and Edward P. Costigan, Democratic candidate for senator in Colorado.

Much Dissatisfaction

This seems to be a year of comparative dissatisfaction and both rebellious groups, wets and progressives, are trying to make the most of it. Thus there is an unusual amount of non-partisan campaigning. Members of both major parties are temporarily deserting to campaign and vote for the other party's candidate because he is dry or wet and progressives are likewise checking their party labels to support one or another of their brethren on the other party's ticket. There isn't enough of this sort of thing to justify predictions of a new era in politics, but there's a lot more of it than usual.

Strange bedfellows are piling in together in Pennsylvania, where Democrats are never supposed to win anything. John H. Humphill, Pinchot's Democratic opponent, has the support of organized wets, conservative public utility and other corporations, many leaders of the notorious Vire Republican machine and a substantial group of labor leaders.

Pinchot, who always has been regarded as a flaming progressive and an unusually enthusiastic dry, may be hard pressed. He has the organized drys and Humphill has the wets. Whereas Republican wets of prominence have deserted to Humphill, Democratic drys such as Vance McCormick of Harrisburg and John A. McSparran, defeated for governor in 1922, have declared for Pinchot.

As the Republican candidate, Pinchot himself naturally has considerable machine support and other strength from conservative or reactionary sources, as well as an official endorsement by the state Federation of Labor.

Walsh in Stiff Fight

In Montana John J. Raskob, the Anti-Saloon League and progressive generally are supporting Senator Walsh, dry progressive Democrat, whose re-election is seriously threatened by Judge Albert J. Galen, Republican wet. Raskob, who is both the Democratic national chairman and a leading wet, personally gave $5000 to the Walsh campaign.

In Colorado Costigan, former member of the tariff commission, is both red-hot progressive and red-hot dry. Progressives of both parties think he would be a great help in the Senate. His Republican opponent, George H. Shaw, is far less dry and far more conservative. Costigan, according to dispatches from the west, has a real chance to win.

Progressives everywhere are intensely interested in seeing Norris re-elected in Nebraska. Norris is the Senate's most important progressive; he is also quite dry. His Democratic opponent, former Senator Gilbert M. Hitchcock, is no reactionary, but is much more conservative than Norris. He favors modification.

There is but one thing necessary for Hope to reap benefit from oil activities and that is the building of additional houses to accommodate the people. If we prepare for them the people will come here and if we do not they are going to Texarkana and Little Rock and Hope will be cheated out of the

Now that Lindy has purchased a farm in New Jersey does he expect to fly from chore to chore?

As between the girls and the humor in current comedies, we'd say a miss was as good as a smile.

Snakes Overcome Their Inherent Animosity

ELY, Nev., Oct. 31.—(UP)—An inherent animosity equal to that of a dog and cat has apparently been overcome by the mutual desire for companionship of a small bull snake and an equally small rattler.

These two reptiles, usually sworn enemies, see imperfectly happy and contented as they bask in the sunshine of a mercantile store's display window. The snakes were captured by a mining man and placed in adjoining pens. Soon the rattler discovered a hole in the partition and joined his companion.

SALT LAKE CITY, Utah, Oct. 31.—(UP)—Debutantes are developing into sensible housewives, experienced in domestic economy. Word of the transition was brought here by Jane Hinkley, Washington, D. C., who addressed the recent convention of the Utah Educational Association.

"Home economics in public schools are bringing about the change, slowly but surely," Miss Hinkley said. The girls are also being taught that ability to shake a wicked cocktail is not everything.

England Building Huge Autogiro For Tests

LONDON, Oct. 30.—(UP)—The largest Autogiro, or "windmill plane" yet built is now under construction for the Air Ministry.

It will carry four persons and is fitted with a 400-horse power air-cooled radial engine.

Supported by four revolving vanes, the Autogiro has a rapid climb and can descend almost vertically. It is hoped with the new engine that the model will be capable of using the flat roof of any moderately large building as a "landing field."

Experiments in farm terracing in an attempt to halt soil erosion are being tried near Troy, Kan.

New Food Given U. S. By Japanese

Americans Adapt Modern Plant Practice to Agar Production

WASHINGTON, Oct. 31.—(UP)—A new American food derived from sea moss is being developed by the adaptation of modern plant practice to one of Japan's oldest industries. Prof. Ross Robertson of the University of California has reported to the American Chemical Society.

Foundation of the industry came about as a result of the findings by Japanese fishermen of ocean vegetation off the coast of California, which yields agar, or seaweed jelly.

The discovery of the raw material and its present commercial development are linked with a series of processes which present a curious intermixture of modern chemistry, Prof. Robertson reported.

A discovery by a peasant mountaineer led to the formation of the agar industry in Japan. It was found that upon being frozen, the seaweed jelly, then a rare delicacy in Japanese homes, could be restored to edible form if it was heated again with water and cooled.

Japan's agar industry today is carried on in much the same way as that of the mountaineer. The sea moss is taken to the mountains during the months of December and February where it can be frozen. It is then boiled and dried to produce the jelly.

A simple establishment in Oriental style was set up in Glendale, California, after the discovery of agar in west coast waters. California climate was not suitable for the industry and artificial refrigeration was introduced. American financial experts refinanced

Detroit's Mayor Faces Physical Breakdown

DETROIT, Oct. 31.—(UP)—Mayor Frank Murphy, whose measures toward the relief of unemployment have gained him nationwide renown, has been warned of a physical breakdown if he continues his present workday schedule.

As a result the mayor has ordered that from 9 to 11:30 a. m. he will devote his time to quiet study in his office, and no one but newspaper men will be admitted.

"To newspaper men I shall be available always," he said. "They represent the public and the public has a right to know how its business is being conducted."

Since he took office a month ago, he has been working from 9 a. m. to midnight daily.

What's What?

The football rules were changed in the recent game between Yale and Georgia. In which Yale was the victor. The rules were changed in the recent game between Yale and Georgia. In which Yale was the victor.

It happened like this: Yale kicked off to Kelly, a Georgia end, who returned the ball about 10 yards before being tackled. He was tackled then so hard that he fell from a top gun. Barreled into the ground and ran across the line with it for what was a touchdown. No problem made. Players and fans alike the decision without a doubt.

Georgia 18, Yale 7

It was only in checking over the game that the error was discovered. Yale, instead of losing to Georgia by a score of 18 to 14, really lost by a score of 18 to 7. Suppose Georgia had not made that last touchdown, and the score at the end of the game had stood 14 to 12? The ensuing decision of Walter Oakeson, commissioner of the Eastern Association for the Selection of Officials, to the effect that Yale had made that touchdown illegally, would have amounted to the same. As a supreme court reversal of a decision in the courts of law, victory for Yale would have been denied to defeat.

The rule governing the matter is that if the ball is recovered by a player of the receiving team, before it is declared dead, and he runs with it, pass it back, or kicks it, if the ball is recovered by a member of the kicking team, the ball is dead at the point of recovery. There is added to prevent controversy: "After a ball has been kicked or it is to be considered a kicked ball until it is declared dead."

DID YOU KNOW THAT—

At those Notre Dame Irish wear the names of Jaskwich, Kurth and Stacey. They are from Wisconsin. Jaskwich is one of the quarter-backs. Stacey is a third-string fullback. He ought to fit in splendidly with what sports writers do on calling "Hook's" raptorial attack. Max Schindler is coming over in December, says Joe Jacobs. Well, well! Very interesting! Shanty Hogan, Giants' catcher, objected when a party invited a negro elevator operator to have a drink in an apartment. The operator walked to Hogan after the party and worked on him with a knife and ball bat. Those Boston Braves look to be headed for the first division next year, with the addition of Wes Schulmerich and Earl Sheely. Bill McKelvie is surely building the team up.

clared "dead." Last September at the rules interpretation meeting, the rules committee passed this regulation:

"When a player of the kicking team recovers the ball under any circumstances, it is dead."

Those Technicalities THAT seems plain enough. Yet the game has been altered so recently in details of this sort during the last few years, that not one in 100 who sees a football game knows offhand just what the actual rules are on affairs such as this.

Can you imagine the umpire in a game of baseball getting away with any such decision as the official announced in New Haven? The fans would chase the erring umpire clear back to the hotel.

BEGIN HERE TODAY

CELIA MITCHELL, 17, leaves Baltimore where she has lived with her aunt, Mrs. Margaret Rogers, to join her father, JOHN MITCHELL, in New York. The parents are divorced and Mrs. Rogers is a widow following a second marriage.

BARNEY SHIELDS, young newspaper photographer, is in love with the girl. Mitchell asks EVELYN PARSONS, beautiful widow, to introduce his daughter to other young people. Mrs. Parsons agrees, considering Celia a means to win Mitchell's affection. She soon becomes jealous of the girl and schemes to get rid of her by encouraging a romance between Celia and JOHN JORDAN, a young man who is a rival of Celia's.

Although Mitchell forbids Celia to see Jordan she goes about with the young man frequently. LILL DUNCAN, a girl of Celia's age, becomes her friend. Lillian comes to New York to work for a newspaper and meets Celia. She tells her she has lost her heart to Jordan.

Celia, Lill and Mrs. Parsons are together when they hear a radio report of a diamond robbery in a building where Shields is working. Celia insists on going to the scene and the others follow. Later Celia and Lillian go to Shields' office, where he finally tells them about the robbery. Shields' telephone and money are stolen but he promises to find them.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY CHAPTER XLIII

FOR an hour before Barney came Celia waited impatiently. She had spent a restless night and slept little, but she was not aware that she was tired. Reaction from the excitement of the past 24 hours had not yet set in.

Celia had made a discovery, and everything else in the world paled into unimportance. She knew she loved Barney Shields.

Her heart had sung his name all morning. Barney Shields! Barney with the gray eyes that laughed at pain and hardship! Barney, so strong and self-reliant! Barney, who never failed! Her Barney!

Hearing his voice over the telephone that morning had been like hearing it for the first time.

Celia had laughed and promised eagerly that she would be waiting for him, but all that she wanted to tell him remained unsaid. Had he guessed? Was it possible that Barney did not know how everything in the world had changed when he himself was the center of that transformation?

At luncheon Evelyn Parsons noted the girl's heightened color, her preoccupied manner. Shrewdly she made deductions.

"Have you had any news from the young man who was in the fire?" she asked casually.

"Barney? Oh, yes, he telephoned. The doctor set his arm and put it in a sling, but he says it isn't a bad break. He's coming this afternoon. I mean Barney, not the doctor."

"How nice! I'm anxious to meet him."

"Oh, I want you to! You'll like Barney, too. Everyone does. He's going to be here at three."

"At three? Well, I must certainly ly manage to say 'how do you do' at least."

Mrs. Parsons turned the conversation into other channels, but she continued to watch Celia and take stock of her observations. For one thing, the girl was not eating. Twice she started when she was spoken to, and then flushed and stumbled in her apologies. There was a far-away look in Celia's dark eyes. Oh, yes, the signs were all there!

LILL had departed immediately after breakfast. It was Mrs. Parsons' custom to spend the hours after luncheon either shopping or at bridge. Celia had set three o'clock as the time for Barney's call, confident they would not be interrupted.

"Are you going out?" she asked as she and Evelyn left the luncheon table.

"A little later. There are some letters I really must attend to first."

Celia mumbled something about a manicure and slipped away to her bedroom. She wanted to be alone. Instead of getting out buffer and file she curled up in the one large chair the room boasted and tried to plan exactly what her first words to Barney would be.

She would welcome him at the door herself. It would help to overcome Barney's impression that she lived surrounded by elegance and luxury far beyond him. Guiltily Celia remembered the afternoon before when he had made it plain he thought she did not want to introduce him to her new friends.

Of course she had tried to avoid meeting Tod Jordan. At thought of Jordan the girl realized she faced another problem. Tod would have to be told she had been mistaken in saying she cared for him. It amazed Celia to discover how detached and impersonal her feeling toward Jordan had become.

A whole train of frightening reflections followed. What was this bewildering thing called love? She had believed herself "in love" with Barney before she came to New York. Then she had met Jordan and told herself she was "in love" with him. Neither of those affections was anything like the overwhelming emotion which stirred her. There was no doubt that this was love—real love, based on admiration, loyalty, her deep need of Barney and a prayer that Barney might need her.

But it was alarming to know that one could make mistakes about love, and to know that one could change.

Celia remembered how Barney Shields had said he loved her, and complained that her affection was not so deep as his own. Oh, but that had been months before! Was it possible Barney's feelings had altered?

For one dreadful moment she suspense lasted. Then Celia forced a little laugh and sprang up from the chair. There was no reason why she should doubt Barney.

A sudden longing that was both ecstasy and pain swept over her. She wanted to feel his arms about her, to tell Barney that he was dearer to her than life, to hear over and over again that he would never go away.

Celia began to dress. As she busied herself before the mirror her thoughts leaped forward. She planned the meeting at which she would introduce Barney to her father. John Mitchell would approve of the young man, she felt sure, because Barney had a profession of which he was proud, and in which he was succeeding.

THE girl glanced up and caught at her reflection. The face in the glass smiled back at her. There was no need to apply rouge today. Her cheeks were pink, and surely her eyes had never been so bright.

She got out her newest frock, slipped it over her shoulders and then hastily put it aside for another. The second dress was rose-colored, quite as expensive as the other, but simpler. Celia remembered that Barney Shields had praised her in the little home-made dress of rose that her mother had fashioned.

As she stood taking a final survey of herself and patting into place a curl equally decorative in its unruly state, she heard a tap on the door.

"Who is it?" Celia called.

Rose, Evelyn's maid, answered. "Mrs. Parsons asked if you could step into her room. Miss Celia."

"Tell her I'll be right in."

Celia looked at her watch. Twelve minutes of three. Then she hurried to Evelyn.

Mrs. Parsons was seated at her desk. She looked particularly well in a dark blue satin gown with creamy lace at the throat. Sunlight, shining through the window, had given her a golden halo. As Celia opened the door she looked up, smiling.

"Dear child!" she exclaimed. "What would I do without you? I've been in perfect agony for half an hour trying to make these figures come out right. Do add them for me, won't you? You're so clever and I'm hopeless at such things!"

Frequently Evelyn had found occasion to profit from Celia's business training. Now she held up a sheet of papers and a memorandum pad. The papers were bills.

"I know they should come to the same figure," Mrs. Parsons continued, "but I simply cannot make them."

"I'll try it," Celia agreed. Mrs. Parsons promptly relinquished the desk chair. The figures on the memorandum pad were unintelligible. Celia saw at once she would have to go through the stack of bills and tabulate the amounts. She glanced at her watch again. Perhaps if she worked swiftly she could finish in time. "I'll slip outside so as not to interrupt," Evelyn said, and disappeared.

THE mathematical problem before Celia was complicated. Furthermore, she was impatient and made two errors at the start. She caught them, began calculations once more, and suddenly heard the ringing of the door bell. Ten minutes after three and she had not finished. It was Barney, of course.

Celia rose. There was no reason why Evelyn's bills should be balanced immediately. She was disgusted with herself for having undertaken the task.

Her heart beat loudly and for a minute she waited to steady herself. Then she went into the living room. Barney was sitting with his back toward her, talking to Evelyn.

Mrs. Parsons saw the girl. "Oh, here you are, Celia!" she said sweetly. "You have company. This young man and I have introduced ourselves, and he's been giving me the most amazing account of that terrible fire. You must hear it!"

"Good afternoon, Barney!" Celia said. It was not the speech she had planned.

Shields was on his feet. He took the girl's hand and smiled his good-humored smile.

"How do you do?" he greeted her with unusual formality. The young man's left arm hung in a sling.

"This is a queer time for me to be making a call," Shields added, "but I'm going to play gentleman for a few days. They tell me I haven't any job until this arm begins to behave."

"You're not—discharged?" He laughed at the alarm in the girl's voice.

"No, no! Nothing like that. Matter of fact, Wagner says I'm going to have a raise. Did you see the pictures in the Telegram? They were mine. Gave the one of the little girl a big play. The boss was rather complimentary."

"Oh, Barney, I'm so glad!" "How splendid!" Evelyn Parsons joined in.

Barney looked embarrassed under praise. He turned the conversation to the fire again. Celia waited impatiently for Mrs. Parsons to leave them. Evidently Evelyn had forgotten her engagement. She did not depart, and at four o'clock when Barney said he must keep an appointment with the doctor, Mrs. Parsons offered to take him in her car.

The afternoon, unsatisfactory as it was to Celia, had a more unpleasant sequel.

County Has

Canned Beef For Winter

HOPE, Oct. 31.—Seven hundred pounds of beef, have been donated for the winter by the Red Cross, through the efforts of Mrs. Mary Buechley, home demonstration agent, as a part of the emergency work in this county. The community kitchen was established at the National Guard armory through the cooperation of the county chamber of commerce, gas, water, and cold storage were donated for the winter. The meat was canned for 18 families having ninety members. The beefs on foot weighed 3,076 pounds, and were valued at $350.00. The canned meat is valued at $350.00, or an average of fifty cents a quart, giving a difference of $250.00 value in canning the beef for winter use.

KIRNAPER TELLS

that Whiskers was in the plot. The two other men he named were Orville Whiskers a cousin of the man arrested and Floyd Winslow, ex-convict and bootlegger, said to be the "brains" of the scheme. The latter two are the men sought.

These developments revealed that Mrs. Yocum, wife of the banker, who had been insisting that she wished no investigation from the authorities, had enlisted the aid of the bankers association inspector. Her public statements were made for the purpose of deluding the kidnapers into belief that the ransom would be paid and no attempt made to catch them.

Ahlgren in his confession, said he was an automobile mechanic of Keokuk, Mo. He is 30. He is known as a street loafer about this town and Wyoming, Ill.

Kidnaping Long Planned
The kidnaping was planned for two months, he said. He and his partners spent much time lounging about Galva, studying the banker's movements. They discovered that he made a regular practice Saturday night of taking his daughters to a moving picture theatre and returning alone to his home, which is located on a large estate on the edge of this city.

The plotters decided that when Yocum returned at about 7 o'clock on a Saturday night would be an ideal time for the abduction. The Yocum estate is removed from the town and there are no other residences within several hundred yards.

"We slapped a chloroformed handkerchief on his face and put adhesive tape over his mouth," said Ahlgren, at the place where we were going to "He never made a bit of noise. He hid him, a little hunting shack on a little fellow, and couldn't put up much of a fight. Then we slipped a sack over his head and put him in the car. About midnight we arrived can read the paper. We read them ourselves, all about how Mrs. Yocum wasn't co-operating with the police. We thought the money would come easy.

"We were suckers. We thought Mrs. Yocum was so scared that she would n't dare double cross us. We let Yocum go without making sure that the dough was in the package. We told him, of course, that if anything went wrong, he would be sorry."

Life is Not All Spinach and Coddled Eggs

What a worry it was in our grandmothers' day—to keep kiddies from over-stuffing eager little tummies! To guard against the danger of too many goodies!

And your youngsters today . . . what of them? Growing, plastic, hungry little bodies. Amazing appetites. Like lovable savages they shed civilization, sometimes—and raid your pantry shelves!

But you can let them eat their fill now. Particularly if you adopt this wonderful modern way of cooking—with Snowdrift for shortening.

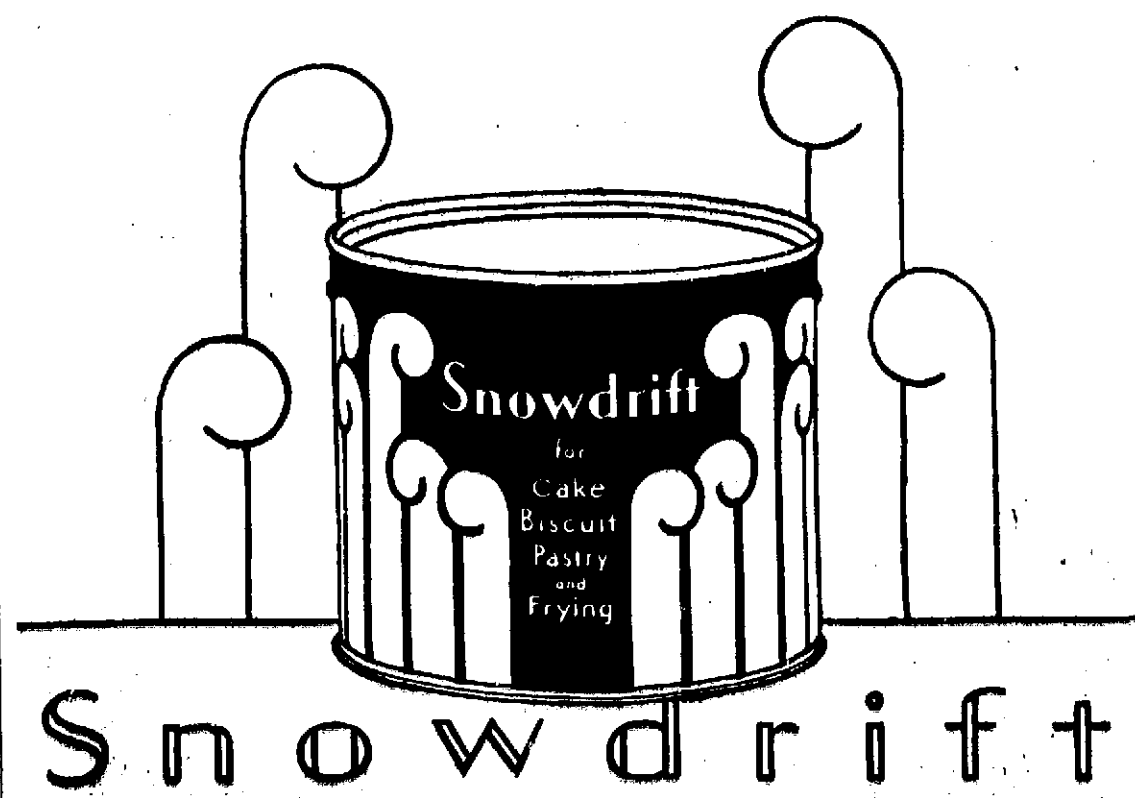

Your cakes and pies will really be flakier, lighter, more wholesome if you use Snowdrift. First of all because Snowdrift is an easily digested, wonderfully pure food in itself. And second, because it always creams-in so perfectly—blends so smoothly with the other ingredients. That, of course, gives lighter cake—finer, more wholesome pie crust.

And for frying---

It's the golden-brown tender crust that makes fried foods so delicious—so tempting to children. And the shortening you use makes this crust. Isn't it nice to know—when you use Snowdrift—that your fried foods will always be wholesome? And so healthful that you can give the kiddies all they want?

Snowdrift at Reduced Price

Snowdrift is now at its lowest price in years. Ask your grocer. You'll find that the price is so low, you can use Snowdrift for all your baking and frying every day.
